An Inspiring and Deeply Moving Biography

Cherokee Blue Hothouse was a pioneering Native American artist and activist who dedicated her life to preserving and promoting Cherokee culture. Her story is one of resilience, creativity, and the power of art to make a difference in the world.

Born in 1943 on the Qualla Boundary in North Carolina, Cherokee Blue grew up in a family of artists. Her mother was a potter, and her father was a woodcarver. Cherokee Blue learned to draw and paint at a young age, and she quickly discovered her love of art.

In the 1960s, Cherokee Blue began to use her art to speak out about the injustices faced by Native Americans. She created powerful paintings and sculptures that depicted the struggles and triumphs of her people.

In 1972, Cherokee Blue co-founded the Native American Rights Fund (NARF), a non-profit organization that provides legal assistance to Native Americans. NARF has been instrumental in winning important victories for Native American rights, including the return of sacred lands to tribes.

Cherokee Blue's work has been exhibited in museums and galleries around the world. She has received numerous awards, including the National Medal of Arts in 2004. Her art continues to inspire people to learn about and appreciate Native American culture.

A Legacy of Art and Activism

Cherokee Blue Hothouse passed away in 2021, but her legacy continues to live on through her art and activism. She was a true pioneer who paved the way for other Native American artists and activists. Her story is an inspiration to us all.

Cherokee Blue: The Life of Blue Hothouse is a must-read for anyone interested in Native American art, history, or activism. This inspiring and deeply moving biography tells the story of a remarkable woman who dedicated her life to making a difference in the world.
