In his groundbreaking book, Narcotics, Nicotine, Alcohol, Cocaine, Peyote, Morphine, and Ether, author Dr. William H. Clark explores the complex relationship between humans and these substances. Clark argues that our desire for mind-altering substances is rooted in our basic biology and that these substances can provide us with a sense of pleasure, escape, and connection that we cannot find elsewhere.

However, Clark also warns that the pursuit of these substances can come at a great cost. Addiction, overdose, and other health problems are all potential risks of substance abuse. In addition, substance abuse can damage our relationships, our careers, and our overall well-being.
