Niue Rising is a gripping and emotionally resonant novel that transports readers to the aftermath of Cyclone Heta, a devastating storm that struck the tiny island nation of Niue in 2004. With vivid imagery and poignant prose, author Steven Watts paints a vivid tapestry of the island's people as they grapple with the aftermath of the storm and strive to rebuild their lives.

At the heart of the story is Fa'afetai, a young woman whose life is forever changed by the cyclone. Her home is destroyed, her family is scattered, and her community is in ruins. In the face of such adversity, Fa'afetai must find a way to pick up the pieces and rebuild her life.

As Fa'afetai embarks on her journey, she encounters a cast of unforgettable characters, each with their own unique story to tell. There is Sione, a fisherman who lost his boat and his livelihood, but finds solace in the sea; Tala, a nurse who tends to the wounded and helps to heal the community's scars; and Moana, a young girl who teaches Fa'afetai the importance of hope and laughter.

Together, these characters form a resilient community, bound together by their shared experiences and their determination to rebuild. They learn to cope with the trauma of the past and find ways to move forward, one step at a time.

Niue Rising is not just a story about a natural disaster. It is a story about the indomitable spirit of the human soul. It is a story about the power of community and the transformative nature of adversity. It is a story that will stay with readers long after they finish reading it.
