

Son of Poacher: A Journey through the Wilds of Conservation

Alan Rabinowitz was born into a family of poachers. His father, a Russian immigrant, hunted and trapped animals in the forests of New Jersey. Rabinowitz's early experiences with wildlife were shaped by this upbringing, and he developed a deep love for the natural world. However, he also saw firsthand the devastating impact that humans can have on the environment.

As a young man, Rabinowitz decided to dedicate his life to conservation. He earned a PhD in ecology from Cornell University and went on to work for the Wildlife Conservation Society. Over the years, he has led groundbreaking research on some of the world's most endangered species, including the jaguar, the tiger, and the giant panda. He has also worked tirelessly to protect these species and their habitats from threats such as poaching, deforestation, and climate change.

In his new memoir, Son of Poacher, Rabinowitz tells the story of his life and work. He writes about his early experiences with wildlife, his struggles to balance his personal life with his conservation work, and the challenges and triumphs he has faced along the way. Son of Poacher is a powerful and inspiring story that will appeal to anyone who cares about the environment and the future of our planet.

““Son of Poacher is a remarkable book. It is a story of hope and redemption, and a powerful reminder of the importance of protecting our planet.” - Jane Goodall”

““Alan Rabinowitz is a true hero. His work has made a real difference in the lives of countless animals and people.” - Sylvia Earle”

““Son of Poacher is a must-read for anyone who cares about the future of our planet.” - Elizabeth Kolbert”
